MANAGING THE HUMAN SIDE OF CHANGE

Change happens. It can be a negative change, like the loss of a job. Or a positive change, such as a relocation that offers new opportunities. Either way, many employees have trouble moving from the comfort of the familiar through the uncertainty of change toward a new beginning. Fortunately, there's a learning process to help them on their journey. Based on a structured three-stage process developed by William Bridges, Ph.D., Transition – The Personal Path Through Change integrates the insights of DiSC® to help employees find the most personally effective way of moving through transition.

CREATE A POSITIVE OUTCOME FOR EMPLOYEES AND YOUR ORGANIZATION

Transition – The Personal Path Through Change is a personal learning guide that helps employees through the emotional transition from “what was” to “what will be.” The benefits of Transition include a faster, smoother journey from frustrating resistance to fulfilling engagement. For your organization, the benefits are even more tangible: higher employee productivity, greater adaptability, and improved innovation during times of change.

BRIDGES' TRANSITION MODEL

Transition is the gradual, psychological process that we undergo in response to changes that occur in the world around us. Dr. William Bridges defines three guideposts on the path to successful transition: Endings, The Neutral Zone, and New Beginnings.

Phase 1: Endings. Every transition begins with an ending, a loss. When things change, people leave behind the way things were — and the way they were in the previous situation. They may be left searching for a new way to define themselves.

Phase 2: The Neutral Zone. The neutral zone is a confusing in-between state, when people are no longer who and where they were, but are not yet who and where they're going to be. Although the neutral zone can be distressing, it also provides many opportunities for creative transformation.

Phase 3: New Beginnings. A new beginning can only happen after people have let go of the past and spent some time in the neutral zone. In this phase, people accept the reality of the change and start to identify with their new situation.
